Madajah was eager to find a job that would help her live a life of stability, and with connections to educational, financial, and professional development resources coordinated by a local community investment partner, she was able to obtain employment and provide for her family.

Through a public assistance program that specializes in mental health and preventing toxic stress, Juan was able to overcome his anxiety and is now able to better socialize with his friends and coworkers. With that assistance, Juan was able to help lead his peers in volunteer efforts and be the best version of himself for his community.

Molly develops her academic and leadership skills in an after-school program, while her parents finish their workdays. Out-of-school-time programs enable childhood and youth success by providing whole-life development skills, which are crucial to the future of the community.

Through United Way's 211 service, Evan was able to receive rent assistance after losing his job earlier this year. United Way's 211 service helps thousands of people across the Tennessee Valley get connected to local resources for needs in the areas of food, housing, employment, health services and more.

Your help is the key to uniting people and resources to build a stronger, healthier community. What we do together today determines how we Live United tomorrow. We are grateful to join with you in improving the education, health and stability of our community.
